

The British Representation Study, 1997

Technical Note

The British Representation Study, 1997 (BRS-97) involved a national survey of prospective parliamentary candidates and MPs from all major parties standing in the 1997 British general election. This is the second survey, following a similar study in 1992(N. 1320)(1).

The research project was conducted under the direction of Dr Pippa Norris (Harvard University) in collaboration with Professor Joni Lovenduski (Southampton University), Professor Anthony Heath (Nuffield College/ CREST), Professor Roger Jowell (Social and Community Planning Research/CREST), and John Curtice (Strathclyde University/ CREST). The research was distributed and administered from the School of Economic and Social Studies at the University of East Anglia and funded by the Nuffield Foundation. The BRS contains questions which have also been asked of the public in the British Election Study, 1997, directed by the CREST team, facilitating a mass-elite comparison on release of this dataset.

We would also like to acknowledge the support of all the parties, particularly the help provided by Dame Angela Rumbold, MP at Conservative Central Office; Peter Coleman, The Labour Party; Sandra Dunk, Candidate's Officer at the Liberal Democratic Party; Alisdair Morgan, National Secretary of the Scottish National Party; Karl Davies, Chief Executive of Plaid Cymru; and the Secretary of the Green Party. Moreover the study would not have been possible without the help and cooperation of all the candidates who took time from a busy schedule to complete the questionnaire. We would also like to thank all colleagues who commented on earlier versions of the draft questionnaire including Philip Cowley (Hull University), Alison Park (SCPR), Ron Johnston (University of Bristol), John Street (University of East Anglia), Anthony King (Essex University), and David Denver (University of Lancaster). The research would not have been possible without the invaluable assistance of many who worked on the project at different stages including qualitative interviews by Lucy Peake (Southampton University), data entry by David Jones, Nick Bent and Kenton Beerman (Harvard University), and survey administration by Anne Martin and Wendy Hooke (University of East Anglia).

The project used a mail survey which was sent out to all candidates selected by the main British parties (Conservative, Labour, Liberal Democrat, SNP, Plaid Cymru, and Green) by 1st June 1996. The Labour and Conservative parties had chosen about 600 candidates at this stage, although other parties had selected fewer. The first wave of the survey was sent out, with an official covering letter from each party, from 18th June to 3rd July 1996. A post-card reminder was sent out two weeks later, followed by a third wave with a complete questionnaire and reminder letter in mid to late July. In total 1,628 questionnaires were sent out and we received 999 replies, representing a response rate of 61.4 percent. The survey includes 178 incumbent British MPs and 821 other parliamentary candidates. In addition, we received 122 refusals (7.5 percent), usually from MPs who noted that as a matter of policy they never responded to any surveys. The response rate indicates a fairly even balance between parties although the rate of return was higher among candidates than incumbent MPs.

In this release of the dataset all identifying characteristics of individual MPs (such as constituency reference numbers) have been removed to preserve confidentiality. Users of the data should note that no information should be published which is attributable to individual candidates, and users should note the source of the data as The British Representation Study 1997.
