Appendix I: Research Centers

KENNEDY SCHOOL RESEARCH CENTERS

In addition to the Hauser Center activities, the work of several other KSG research centers is likely to be of interest to students, as well as practitioners in the field, who are studying nonprofit issues. Links to each of these centers are listed at www.ksg.harvard.edu/ksgpress/research_pub/index.html.

Center for Public Leadership - Launched in 2000 through a generous grant from the Wexner Foundation, the Center for Public Leadership has responded rapidly to the burgeoning interest in leadership. The Center is dedicated to excellence in leadership education and research. It is equally committed to bridging the gap between leadership theory and practice. The Center for Public Leadership provides a forum for students, scholars, and practitioners who are committed to the idea that effective public leadership is essential to the common good. It creates opportunities for reflection and discovery, and promotes the dynamic exchange of ideas among those from different disciplines, sectors, cultures, and nations.

Carr Center for Human Rights Policy - The mission of the Carr Center is to train future leaders for careers in public service and to apply first-class research to the solution of public policy problems. The Center's research, teaching and writing are guided by a commitment to make human rights principles central to the formulation of good public policy in the United States and throughout the world. The Center uses its: convening power to create a safe space for human rights organizations and other policy actors to engage in constructive self-criticism and to forge new partnerships; research capacity to evaluate the human rights policies of the United States and other governments and to analyze the dilemmas that need to be resolved when human rights principles are brought to bear on major public policy choices; and, teaching capacity to inspire future leaders to make respect for human rights principles a central commitment of democratic leadership.

The Malcolm Wiener Center for Social Policy - The Malcolm Wiener Center for Social Policy is a vibrant intellectual community of faculty, masters and Ph.D. students, researchers, and administrative staff striving to improve public policy and practice in the areas of health care, human services, criminal justice, inequality, education, and labor. The work of the Center draws on the worlds of scholarship, policy, and practice to address pressing questions by: carrying out research on important policy issues that affect the lives of those who are most vulnerable and needy; providing professional education for those in the world of practice; educating the next generation of academics and policy scholars; ensuring that research and education are closely tied to and draw from politics and practice in the field; and, developing working partnerships with the broader policy community. Over the last decade and a half, the Wiener Center has been an influential voice in domestic policy through faculty work on community policing, welfare reform, youth violence, inner city poverty, youth and the low-wage labor market, American Indian economic and social development, and medical error rates. The Center's research portfolio is both broad and deep, spanning many academic disciplines, encompassing traditional research as well as executive sessions, case-based research, and action research, and employing a variety of research methodologies.

Center for International Development at Harvard University - The Center for International Development at Harvard University (CID) was established on July 1, 1998 by the Harvard Institute for International Development (HIID) and the Kennedy School of Government (KSG) to serve as Harvard's primary center for research on sustainable international development. Housed at the KSG, CID is a University-wide research center, drawing upon faculty, staff, and researchers from the KSG, the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, the School of Public Health, the Medical School, the Graduate School of Education, the Law School, and the Business School. CID involves Harvard students in its work through a wide array of opportunities, including weekly seminars, conferences, travel grants, office space, research projects, and student organization sponsorship.

Joint Center for Housing Studies - The Center's research on housing and community development issues reflects the premise that the resolution of these issues calls for interdisciplinary approaches and cooperation among leaders in academia, government, and the public and private sectors. The Center publishes reports, articles, and papers including the nationally recognized annual study, "The State of the Nation's Housing." The Center's educational activities include student research assistantships, graduate fellowships, regular lecture series, occasional major policy conferences, and the annual John T. Dunlop Lecture on Housing. The Director of the Joint Center is Nicolas P. Retsinas, former Assistant Secretary for Housing-Federal Housing Commissioner at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A. Alfred Taubman Center for State and Local Government - In addition to the array of research and activities on public sector issues, several special programs on education, information technology applications in governance, and civic engagement in America may be of interest to nonprofit students and practitioners. Experienced nonprofit managers may be interested in applying as evaluators in the Center's Program on Innovations in American Government, which sponsors an annual program of awards to innovative federal, state, and local government initiatives.

Ash Institute for Democratic Governance and Innovation - The Roy and Lila Ash Institute for Democratic Governance and Innovation fosters excellence in government around the world in order to generate and strengthen democracy. Through its research, publications, curriculum support, global network, and awards program, the Ash Institute explores critical issues in democratic practice and effective governance. By engaging a broad, global community in which knowledge is shared, by generating and supporting research and curriculum materials, and by highlighting exemplary government programs, the Institute serves as a catalyst for successfully addressing many of the world's most pressing concerns and, in turn, improving the lives of its citizens.

Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs (BCSIA) - The Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs (BCSIA) is the hub of the John F. Kennedy School of Government's research, teaching, and training in international security affairs, environmental and resource issues, and science and technology policy. The Center's mission is to provide leadership in advancing policy-relevant knowledge about the most important challenges of international security and other critical issues where science, technology, environmental policy, and international affairs intersect. The Center's leadership begins with the recognition of science and technology as driving forces transforming threats and opportunities in international affairs. The Center integrates insights of social scientists, natural scientists, technologists, and practitioners with experience in government, diplomacy, the military, and business to address critical issues.

Center for Business and Government - The Center for Business and Government helps to develop solutions to some of society's most challenging problems at the interface of business and government. It is a catalyst, convener, and innovator at the critical intersection where private enterprise meets governance. In the United States and around the world, we promote economic growth while helping public officials promulgate fair, thoughtful and efficient policies. Bringing together thought leaders from both the public and private sectors, and drawing on the unparalleled intellectual resources of the Kennedy School and Harvard University, we examine the issues, create a dialogue, and seek answers.

Center for Ethics and the Professions - The Edmond J. Safra Foundation Center for Ethics encourages teaching and research about ethical issues in public and professional life; helps meet the growing need for teachers and scholars who address questions of moral choice in business, education, government, law, medicine, and public policy; brings together those with competence in philosophical thought and those with experience in professional education; and promotes a perspective on ethics informed by both theory and practice. A guiding principle of the Center is that moral and political theory can help identify and clarify ethical issues in public life. The Center explores the connection between the problems that professionals confront and the social and political structures in which they act.

The Institute of Politics

The Institute of Politics was created as a living memorial to President John F. Kennedy, to inspire undergraduate students to enter careers in politics and public service. Among its many programs the Institute sponsors the John F. Kennedy Jr. Forum, a premiere lecture series. The mission of the Institute of Politics is to unite and engage students, particularly undergraduates, with academics, politicians, activists, and policymakers on a non-partisan basis and to stimulate and nurture their interest in public service and leadership. The Institute strives to promote greater understanding and cooperation between the academic world and the world of politics and public affairs.

Joan Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy - The Joan Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy is a Harvard University research center dedicated to exploring the inter-section of press, politics and public policy in theory and practice. The Center strives to bridge the gap between journalists and scholars and, increasingly, between them and the public. Through teaching and research at the Kennedy School of Government and through its program of fellows and conferences, the Center is at the forefront of discussions in this area. The Center has emerged as a major source for research on U.S. campaigns and elections, journalism and public policy, international news, and race, gender and the press. It is a widely respected convener of journalists, scholars and political activists working to help the press improve its role in democracy. The Joan Shorenstein Center Advisory Board includes distinguished journalists, scholars and practitioners.

The Women on Public Policy Program (WAPPP) - The Women and Public Policy Program of Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government was founded with the internal goal of incorporating an understanding of gender perspectives on public policy into the education of future and current leaders trained at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, and the external goal of contributing to the canon of scholarship on women and public policy.

KENNEDY SCHOOL NONPROFIT RELATED-ACTIVITIES

Social Enterprise in Action (SEIA) - A professional interest council at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, aims to build awareness around social enterprise and provide students with the skills needed to lead socially responsible ventures by putting on lectures, workshops and networking events. zSEIA seeks to help for-profit organizations think about ways to be socially responsible in their business practices, both philanthropically and operationally, and help non-profits organizations adopt best practice principles to help their organizations become sustainable. In addition, SEIA looks to the public sector to devise innovative incentives and strategies to encourage public/private partnerships and increase cross-sector collaboration.

The Saguaro Seminar: Civic Engagement in America - The Saguaro Seminar develops tools and strategies for increased civic engagement in America. After three years of periodic meetings among a diverse group of leaders that included government workers, religious leaders, labor union activists, high-tech and business executives, elected officials and street workers, the Seminar published "Better Together" in 2000, highlighting promising strategies for civic re-engagement (www.bettertogether.org). The Saguaro Seminar has been developing metrics for social capital measurement, beginning with the Social Capital Community Benchmark Survey, in which 30,000 Americans were polled on their levels of civic engagement (see www.ksg.harvard.edu/saguaro/communitysurvey). From the Benchmark Survey, the Seminar undertook follow-up research on the connection between diversity and social capital.

HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL (HBS) RESEARCH CENTERS

Social Enterprise Initiative - The Social Enterprise Initiative at generates and shares knowledge that helps individuals and organizations create social value in the nonprofit, private, and public sectors. A collaboration of HBS faculty, students, alumni, and staff, Social Enterprise plays a critical role in supporting the School's mission to educate leaders who make a difference in the world by integrating social enterprise-related research, teaching, and activities into the daily life of HBS.

Since its creation in 1993, the Social Enterprise Initiative has developed course, programs, research, institutional relationships, and other efforts to support its mission. Activities span the major areas of Harvard Business School, including the MBA program, executive education, alumni relations, research and publications.

HARVARD BUSINESS SCHOOL NONPROFIT-RELATED ACTIVITIES

Social Enterprise Club - The Social Enterprise Club (SEC) at Harvard Business School is a forum for students who are interested in the intersection of nonprofit, business, and government. Throughout the year, the group organizes many opportunities for students to meet and create connections with organizational leaders, other students, alumni, faculty, and administration engaged in social enterprise. It sponsors an annual Conference on Social Enterprise, speaker engagements, a social enterprise business plan contest, alumni and nonprofit networking events, and other activities to educate and inform students of career options in social enterprise. The club also supports students pursuing careers and summer jobs in the social sector by jointly coordinating the Internship and Loan Forgiveness Program with the Initiative on Social Enterprise. With over 350 student members, the Social Enterprise Club is one of the largest and most active clubs on campus.
