TREK IN BRIEF

El Paso, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, and Navajo Nation are all communities at economic, social, and policy crossroads with rich histories and unique cultural attributes. Leaders and community stakeholders in these cities are facing a new set of challenges in the 21st century in a variety of fields: tribal governance, border policy, community development and advocacy, and state-federal relations. Thanks to the support of the Taubman Center for State and Local Government, we look forward to examining how local policymakers and leaders from the private and nonprofit sectors are taking on these challenges.

El Paso has drawn increasing attention over the last year.

From Beto O’Rourke’s surprisingly strong Senate campaign to Trump’s visit to the border wall, the city sits at the nexus of dramatic national attention. Originally inhabited by the Manso, Suma, Piro and Tigua Native American tribes, El Paso has been through colonization and conquest, passing from its indigenous people, to Spain, Mexico, the Republic of Texas, the United States, the Confederate States, and back to the United States. Today, the city is majority Latinx (80%), 13% white, 4% African American and 1% Asian. The city has a council-manager system in which an elected city council—which includes the mayor and serves as the city’s primary legislative body—appoints a chief executive called a city manager to oversee municipal operations and implement the council’s policy and legislative initiatives.

El Paso is a growing metropolis and an important cultural and economic center for the American Southwest. The city is defined by borders - sitting at the juncture of both Texas and New Mexico, and the U.S. and Mexico, with Ciudad Juarez just across the Rio Grande. El Paso is the largest city on the U.S.-Mexico border and the center of a region of 2.5 million people. This region is known colloquially as the Borderplex or Paso del Norte and includes Ciudad Juarez in Mexico, El Paso in Texas, and Las Cruces in New Mexico. El Paso is also the county seat of El Paso County and the site of Fort Bliss, one of the largest army installations in the country. The city is led by Mayor Dee Margo (R), who has attracted national attention for his opposition to President Trump. The area’s new Congresswoman, Veronica Escobar (D), has similarly taken a strong stance against security crackdowns at the border.
Intersecting Cultures, Protecting Peoples

El Paso is a city of intersections—between countries, economies, and people. We’ll explore how these intersections provide both vibrant opportunities and difficult challenges for a region at the forefront of a humanitarian crisis. We’ll meet with city, county, and federal officials to discuss border security, immigration, humanitarian aid, trade, economic development, transportation, and politics. We will also meet with representatives from two NGOs working on refugee and migrant issues at the U.S.-Mexico border, and take a guided tour of the city’s border wall.

Biographies

RUBEN GARCIA
Ruben Garcia is the founder and executive director of Annunciation House, a settlement house style nonprofit providing a “house of hospitality” for the homeless poor, especially migrants and refugees. In April 2012, Garcia received the Teacher of Peace Award from Pax Christi USA, a left-leaning Catholic peace organization. Mr. Garcia was recently featured in the New York Times, saying, “We have never seen these kinds of numbers,” referencing the 3,600 migrants his organization received in a single week in February, the highest number since the group’s founding in 1978.

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY RIVERA
Representative Henry Rivera was elected in Spring 2017 and is currently serving his first term in office. He joined the El Paso Police Department at age 24 and served for nearly 35 years; upon his election to the City Council he resigned from the Police Department. While in the Police Department, Rivera earned a Peace Officers License, with a specialized emphasis on mental health, domestic violence, gang intervention, and physical and cyber bullying.

REPRESENTATIVE CASSANDRA HERNANDEZ
Representative Cassandra Hernandez was elected as the District 3 City Representative in Spring 2017 and is currently serving her first term in office. She previously served in leadership roles in Workforce Development at several area nonprofits and as support staff for City Council representatives.

MARYCRUZ DE LEON
Marycruz De Leon is a Senior Economic Analyst at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, El Paso Branch. Previously she was the Director of Research at the Borderplex Alliance and an economist at Moody’s Analytics. She received her master’s degree in economics from the University of Texas at El Paso and her bachelor’s degree from Baylor University.

FATHER BOB MOSHER
Father Bob Mosher is a member of the Catholic Missionary Society of St. Columban. The El Paso Columban Mission Center serves both Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso, Texas and offers exposure programs to visiting groups to facilitate their contact with organizations and institutions related to U.S./Mexico border issues, including poverty, migration and human rights.

MELISSA LOPEZ
Melissa Lopez is an Attorney at Law and the Executive Director of Diocesan Migrant & Refugee Services, Inc. the largest provider of free and low cost immigration legal services in West Texas and New Mexico and a ministry of the Catholic Church in El Paso.

COLONEL STEPHEN MURPHY
Colonel Stephen Murphy is the commander of Fort Bliss, the largest installation in FORSCOM (United States Army Forces Command) and second-largest in the Army overall. As Garrison Commander, he is responsible for infrastructure, emergency services, and quality-of-life and support programs, leading an organization of 3,000 soldiers, civilians and contractors. Previously, Colonel Murphy was the Chief of the Army Aviation Transformation Division. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point and the US Army War College.
COUNTY COMMISSIONER
CARLOS LEON
Carlos Leon is the El Paso County Precinct 1 County Commissioner, a role he has served in since 2012. He previously served as the El Paso Chief of Police after a long career in the department, and as a consultant for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. The commissioners court functions as the county’s primary legislative and policy-making body. The El Paso County Commissioners Court is made up of the county judge, who serves as the county’s chief executive officer, and four commissioners. The judge is elected county-wide, and the commissioners are elected by district.

JON BARELA
Jon Barela is the Chief Executive Officer of the Borderplex Alliance, a nonprofit organization dedicated to economic development and policy advocacy in the El Paso, Texas; Las Cruces, New Mexico; and Cd. Juárez, Chihuahua region. Previously, he served as New Mexico’s Economic Development Cabinet Secretary and New Mexico’s Assistant Attorney General and Director of the Civil Division. He began his career in public service as a senior aide to the late New Mexico Congressman Joe Skeen on the House Appropriations Committee, and he earned his law degree from Georgetown while working for Congressman Skeen.

MARCOS DELGADO
Marcos Delgado is the Executive Vice President at the Borderplex Alliance. His responsibilities include business recruitment, retention and expansion efforts, economic development and strategic partnerships. He also oversees the organization’s operations management. Previously he held engineering and engineering management positions with companies such as Rockwell International, TI Automotive Group and the Whirlpool Corporation.

ANNETTE GUTIERREZ
Annette Gutierrez is the Executive Director of the Rio Grande Council of Governments. The Rio Grande Council of Governments is a voluntary association of local governments formed under Texas law in January of 1967. The organization was initiated to further intergovernmental cooperation and coordination in the planning, development and delivery of governmental services within El Paso County, Texas.
Santa Fe pulses with history, art, and intersecting cultures.

The state capital, it is situated on one of the oldest continuously occupied sites in the Western hemisphere, originally by the Pueblo and Tanoan people. It was once the seat of the Spanish empire in North America, and is the current state capital. The city retains strong Pueblo and Spanish architectural influences, and has been recognized as a UNESCO World Creative City in Design, Crafts, and Folk Art.

Today, Santa Fe's economy is primarily driven by tourism and government. In the past few years, issues such as ranked-choice voting, straight-ticket voting, and concerns about public education funding and quality, have dominated the local and state policy arena.

In 2018, Governor Michelle Lujan Grisham was elected as the first Democratic woman governor of New Mexico. She succeeded former Governor Susana Martinez (R), the first woman governor of New Mexico. In local politics, Santa Fe’s mayoral governance structure has undergone recent reforms. In 2018, the city switched to ranked-choice voting to elect its mayor, under a new strong-mayor system with a nearly quadrupled salary. And in March 2018, the city elected Alan Webber, the founder of Fast Company, as mayor.

As Santa Fe navigates these changes while preserving its cultural history, we'll get the chance to experience its beauty and explore its challenges.
New Governance, City and State Tensions

Learning from organizers, businesspeople, and policymakers, we will explore a range of perspectives on issues of child welfare, workforce development, and statewide governing amidst deep political diversity.

Biographies

JAMES JIMINEZ
James is the Executive Director of New Mexico Voices for Children and an adjunct professor in Public Administration. In both positions he draws from his experience in using the budget as a strategic tool while working in state and city government. James served as the Chief of Staff under Governor Bill Richardson from 2006 to 2008.

ALLAN OLIVER
Allan Oliver is the Executive Director of the Thornburg Foundation. He oversees the Foundation’s Strategic Initiatives in early childhood education, good government reforms and food and agriculture, as well as Community Funding grants for human services and civil rights, opportunities for children and youth, environmental protection and public policy.

MARCELA DIAZ
Marcela Diaz is the Executive Director of Somos Un Pueblo Unido, a community-based, immigrant-led organization for worker and racial justice and human rights—respecting diversity and integrating newcomers. Somos Un Pueblo Unido is also a one-stop shop for low wage workers to get trained about their rights and resources available to them.

GLENN SCHIFFBAUER
Glenn Schiffbauer is the Executive Director of the Santa Fe Green Chamber of Commerce. He has founded two small businesses and promotes a number of initiatives, including clean renewable energy, “buy local” campaigns, and methane mitigation. He is a founder of the Next Generation Water Summit.

JOHN BINGAMAN
John Bingaman is the Chief of Staff to New Mexico Governor Lujan Grisham. He oversees policy development and legislation as the Governor pursues reforms to public education and seeks to modernize the state’s oil-dependent economy.

ERIK LITZENBERG
Erik Litzenberg is the City Manager for the City of Santa Fe. He started his career in public service as a firefighter with the Santa Fe County Fire Department and has served in most positions in the City of Santa Fe Fire Department over the past 21 years, most recently as Fire Chief.
Albuquerque is known as Burque or the Duke City.

Petroglyphs carved into rock are a testament to the city’s earliest Native American inhabitants, and are still preserved at nearby Petroglyph National Monument. The Spanish colonized Albuquerque in the early 1700s, a time period reflected in the Spanish-style plaza of Old Town Albuquerque. The Sandia Mountains run to the east of the city, and the Rio Grande River runs through it, as does Route 66, featuring neon-lit signs and vintage hotels.

Albuquerque is the largest city in New Mexico, with over half a million residents living within city limits, and nearly a million residents spread across the broader metropolitan area. The city is diverse, with a population that is nearly 47% Hispanic and roughly 5% Native American. The city’s economy is centered around major employers in technology, energy, military and defense contracting, and there are numerous efforts underway to invest and grow local small businesses.

Albuquerque has a mayor and a nine member city council. In 2017, Tim Keller was elected mayor in the city’s nonpartisan mayoral election. Regionally, Albuquerque is located in Bernalillo County, which has five elected members of the board of commissioners and an appointed county manager. This past November, residents of the region made history when they elected Deb Haaland to represent New Mexico’s 1st Congressional District. She is among the first Native American women to serve in Congress, and holds the seat once filled by now-Governor Lujan Grisham.

SUSY SARMIENTO
Susy Sarmiento is the Albuquerque Site Director for the Family Independence Initiative, an anti-poverty non-profit that allows individuals and families in poverty to map out their own strategies for economic mobility, and offers small grants and social networking to individuals in pursuit of those plans. FII operates in 12 cities nationwide. Susy previously worked in education administration at the high school and college level in New Mexico, helping underrepresented students connect to resources and opportunities.

BILL MCCAMLEY
Bill McCamley is the New Mexico Cabinet Secretary of Workforce Solutions, a position to which he was appointed by Governor Lujan-Grisham in January 2019. He previously spent six years representing Las Cruces in the state House. Bill earned an MPP from HKS in 2003.

ALVIN WARREN
Alvin Warren is a Program Officer for the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, one of the largest philanthropic foundations in the U.S., where he guides their efforts to reduce childhood poverty in New Mexico. He was the Cabinet Secretary of the New Mexico Indian Affairs Department from 2008 to 2010, and held various leadership positions as a member of the Santa Clara Pueblo tribe. Alvin was an MC/MPA student at HKS from 2012-2013 and helped found the City + Local PIC.

STATE REP. ABBAS AKHIL
State Rep. Abbas Akhil is currently serving his first term in the legislature, where he represents part of Albuquerque. He is an engineer by training who spent his career in energy storage, renewable energy, and clean energy innovation. He retired from Sandia National Labs before forming his own energy consulting business, Renewable Energy Ventures, LLC, in 2012. Sandia National Laboratories is one of three National Nuclear Security Administration research and development laboratories. Originally from India, he has lived in New Mexico for over 40 years. Rep. Akhil is the first Muslim American ever elected to the New Mexico legislature.
The Navajo Nation has the largest reservation in the country. The second-largest federally recognized tribe in the United States, the Navajo’s reservation covers parts of three U.S. states. Beginning in 1846, its historical relationship with the United States is fraught with pain, suffering, and displacement. In the spring of 1864, around 9,000 Navajo were forced to walk over 300 miles, often in freezing temperatures, and without adequate food, water, and supplies. This episode is referred to as the “Long Walk,” and remains a prominent part of Navajo cultural consciousness. While Navajo were allowed to return to some ancestral lands upon the establishment of a reservation in 1868, Navajo children were forced to acclimatize to American society via required attendance of boarding schools, where they suffered from inadequate food, overcrowding, manual labor, and punishment for speaking Navajo.

Today, the Navajo Nation has an elected government with three branches (executive, legislative, and judicial), but remains under the purview of the United States and must submit all proposed laws to the Bureau of Indian Affairs. The Navajo people continue to struggle disproportionately with high rates of unemployment and health disparities. In 2019, the Land Buy-Back Program will return to the Navajo Nation. The program provides $1.9 billion to tribal nations to rectify fractionation, or when allotments of land are owned by many inheritors.
Sovereignty, Development, & Future Leaders

Our visit will intertwine Navajo past and future. As we explore where the Navajo government sees the state of sovereignty going forward, we’ll also learn about the legacies of sovereignty with the US Federal government. Throughout, we will also discuss the importance of Navajo culture and values and their fight to preserve this. Finally, we will be speaking with the youth of Navajo Nation about their community, and the issues that they’re passionate about. What is it like to grow up today in Navajo Nation? What are their plans for the future?
