Financing Your Education
Funding Your Graduate Education: A Partnership

At Harvard Kennedy School (HKS), we see financial assistance as a partnership. We support as many students as we can with our limited amount of merit-based fellowships and scholarships. For your part, you must eliminate consumer debt, maintain a modest standard of living, research external funding sources and save when possible.

You must apply for financial assistance before you’re admitted to HKS to ensure that you will be considered. The only opportunity for you to apply for assistance is before admission. Opportunities to apply for funding after enrolling—other than loans—are extremely limited.

This guide provides a brief overview of what HKS has to offer. The Office of Student Financial Services (SFS) website includes more information on funding resources and how to apply: www.hks.harvard.edu/admissions-aid/funding-your-education

Harvard-Wide Fellowships

The Committee on General Scholarships (CGS) provides a variety of financial assistance to all Harvard students. These funds are very competitive—admitted applicants and current students from around the University are eligible.

CGS Restricted Scholarships are awarded to residents of particular localities or descendants of specific families. Restricted scholarships range in amount, typically a few thousand dollars, and are intended to be supplementary funding. Applicants are considered based upon the information provided on the hks Application for Financial Assistance.

CGS International Fellowships are country-specific. These funds are not awarded through hks and require a separate application.

Detailed applications, contact information as well as a full list of fellowship and restricted scholarship opportunities are available at: scholarships.harvard.edu.

Federal Loans and Work-Study

Stafford Loans
If you are a domestic student, you may borrow up to $20,500 in direct Stafford loans. Their interest rate is based on the 10 year T-bill as auctioned each May plus 3.6%. An 1.024 percent origination fee is assessed at disbursement. You have a six-month grace period after you are no longer enrolled at HKS before you must start paying back your loan.

Work-Study
The Work-Study program subsidizes employers that hire work-study students. Only U.S. citizens and permanent residents with demonstrated financial need are eligible for work-study. Work-study is allocated to students on a first-come, first-served basis, with preference given to second-year students. We discourage first-year students from working.

Private or Grad PLUS Loans
You may find these loans are helpful to bridge the gap between your cost of attendance and other aid received. If interest rates are the determinative factor in securing loans, in some cases private loans can offer you lower interest rates than the Grad PLUS loan. These rates tend to be variable; an initially low rate may increase substantially over time. The best rates are generally only available if you have strong credit scores. Grad PLUS loans have greater repayment flexibility—including income-based repayment—and protections not offered by private loans such as unemployment and economic hardship deferments and public service loan forgiveness. Note that Grad PLUS loans are for domestic students only.

For information on borrowing private loans visit:
sfs.harvard.edu/private-loan-options.

Additional Information

Loans for International Students
If you are an international student, you cannot borrow U.S. federal student loans but you may apply for private education loans. Details are available in the “Loans for International Students” section of the SFS website.

External Funding
There are many resources offered by outside organizations that are not affiliated with Harvard Kennedy School. We encourage you to actively search for these outside sources of funding. There are philanthropic groups, professional and civic associations, government agencies, nongovernmental organizations, nonprofit organizations employers, and others who provide funding for graduate study. You should contact the organization directly for details, noting that some of these fellowship programs may have restrictions and deadlines.

Most international students must look for funding outside hks to cover their cost of attendance. If you are among them, you will only receive your student visa once you certify full funding for at least your first year of study. It takes time, planning, and persistence to research all potential sources of outside funding.

Details on external resources as well as a searchable resource database are available on the on the Funding Your Education section of the HKS website.

HKS Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP)

HKS recognizes that graduates must often balance significant education debt with the realities of working in modest-paying public sector jobs. The HKS Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) helps graduates—domestic and international—working in the public or nonprofit sector with repaying their traditional educational loans borrowed to attend HKS. If you are an LRAP recipient, you can participate in the program for up to five years. To qualify, you must work full time, either in the U.S. or abroad, for a public or nonprofit sector employer, and earn a household income within the LRAP sliding income scale.

For details visit: www.hks.harvard.edu/lrap.

Federal Public Service Loan Forgiveness (PSLF) Program

If you are a domestic borrower, the PSLF is designed to encourage you to pursue a career in public service. The program forgives your student loans, tax free, if you work full time in a qualifying public service position for at least 10 years. To qualify, you must be employed by federal, state, local, or tribal governments, or a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, and repay your loans on an income-based repayment plan.

The PSLF Program is not an entitlement program. The U.S. Congress has authority to eliminate or change the program at its discretion.
